O. the long and dream Winter!
O. the cold and cruel Winter!
Ever thicker, thicker, thicker,
Froze the lee on lake and river,
Froze the lie on lake and river,
Frest deeper, deeper,
Hell the snow o'er all the landscape,
Fall the covering mow, and drifted
Through the forest, o'er the praise.

Hardly to his cheerless office

could the printer force a masage;
Then essayed to build a fire;
Soogl t for woon and could find none;
Vainly due he in the smow delift,
Found he not he stick for burning,
In the snow found not a salinter,
Nothing that would make a fire,
Nothing that would warm the shantee.

O, the curses of the printer!
Which he issued, large editions,
Dedicated to delinquents—
They who'd said "Send us the paper
"And we'll bring you wone in payment;"
With fur speech they made the promise,
Frantisal, but delayed performance.
And the man of types had waited,
Whited for the logs to come down—
(as we log t that make good freewood—
Waited wainly for his wood-pile.)
Waited as the winds grew colder.

On that stinging freezing morning—Cold enough to freeze—over—Naught had he to make a free. For his word had all gone up! And the colof man, the editor, the was sick, at home recruiting—Could not go and dun delinquents, Saying "Bong me that lead or woon, I'll credit it on subscription." So the printer wrought in serrow—Freez's yppes, and aching fingers—Sought to set up all the copy, That the paper might come out as usual.

But with solemn oaths and phrases Youed he that in cold weather The There would be no more forthcoming, Unless each man who was indebted Should forthwich bring in the fuel. Hearige! Read and ponder—O'er this song of NEL, the Typo.
